Dear Andy:

There has certainly been a great deal of floundering around here in trying to arrange for your Russian keyboard typewriters. I checked on it from time to time and had been advised by [REDACTED] that they were going to take care of it. However there seems to be some security reason on their part which has prevented them from doing anything effective.

I asked [REDACTED] to explore directly with the Services Division the possibility of obtaining a typewriter to meet your needs. They have furnished us with the two enclosed pages from a Remington Rand catalog and advise us that procurement of typewriters according to these specifications from Remington is not difficult.

The Advisory Council is unable to locate the chart which you so carefully made and gave them last summer. Accordingly I am transmitting these enclosures and if you will select the keyboard which appears best to meet your needs we will attempt to requisition them without further delay. It might be well for you to indicate a second or third choice so that if we are unable to get the first choice we can try the second or third. Also, would a standard typewriter meet your needs if we are unable to obtain an electric one? I do not know what snags we will run into but we will at least try.

Please return these pages from the catalog since we have them only on loan from the Services Division.

Sincerely,
